Developments in soil mechanics are based on research

A large number of facilities is available for small and large scale research projects. The development of apparatus and instrumentation is an important aspect of DSML's research work.

Besides research to improve quality and to support and broaden consulting activities, also commissioned research projects are carried out for government bodies and private industry. These are related on the one hand with the evaluation of new foundation techniques, such as new pile types, and on the other hand with the development of practical and fundamental knowledge of and insight into behaviour of soil when subjected to stress or strain. Examples of the latter are: dredging techniques, ground and porewater pressures, response to pile driving and other dynamic loads and the influence of cyclic loading on the behaviour of the foundation subsoil.

Explanation

1. Exhibit on World War II.

2. The Annex. In the hall you can see the paper on the windows that hid the outside world from view. Behind the hinged bookcase is the door, the top of which was hidden by a map.

3. The room of the Frank family. Mr. and Mrs. Frank and their eldest daughter Margot slept here. On the wall you see a map of Normandy with the Allies' progress marked on it. Next to the map are a number of lines showing the children's growth.

4. Anne's room. This is Anne's bedroom, which she shared with Mr. Dussel. Anne cut pictures out of magazines and pasted them on the walls.

5. Washroom. (invisible on drawing). The toilet and the washroom could only be used outside office hours. Otherwise the noises would filter through to the people working downstairs, incurring the risk of discovery and betrayal.

6. The room of the Van Daan family. A steep stairway leads from the washroom to the room of Mr. and Mrs. Van Daan, which also served as the hideaways' kitchen and living-room. In the evenings all the windows had to be blacked out. You can still see the blocks behind which the black slats were placed.

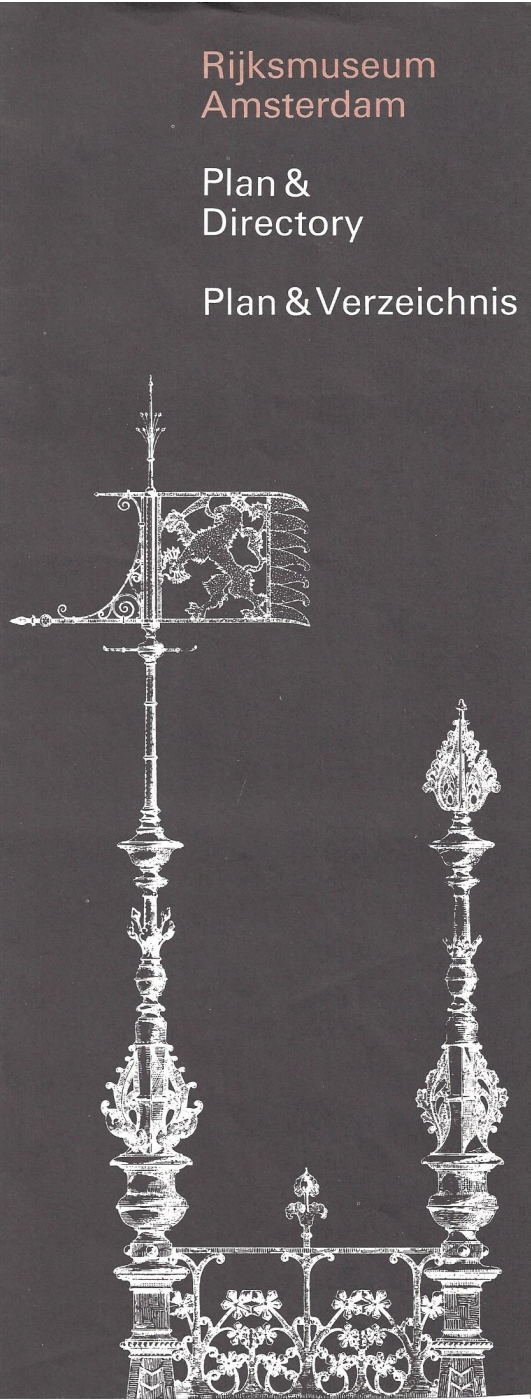

7. Peter's room. Here you see the stairs leading to the attic, with the only window that could safely be opened. The small stock of food was also stored here.

8. Exhibit on Anne and the Diary. Through a corridor put in after the war you come to the exhibit 'Anne and the Diary'. Some of the information given here is also included in the chapter on the reverse side of this folder.

9. Information counter. On the other side of the room you will find panels on current events, giving examples of prejudice, discrimination and repression as they still occur in the world today.

10. Exhibition room and exit. Annually changing exhibits are held here on subjects related to the goals of the Anne Frank Foundation.
