Christoph.

When you were four or five years old, one day we lost you while you played at the White Rocks. Panic stations everywhere! Eventually in despair I dashed up to the main road, thinking it just possible that you had somehow climbed the cliffs. I found you on the road near the quarry on the land-ward side of the road. You said that you had climbed up "through a cave".

I thought this possible, though highly unlikely, for I could see no possible route. I told the story for years, but, since everybody seemed to think that I was just romancing, I eventually shut up.

I recently came across a technical ~~work~~ work from the New University of Ulster about the various limestones on the N. Antrim coast. Overleaf is a copy of one page, and it shows, in the top left-hand corner, the cleft up which you came.

Vindicated at last!!! --- but, for God's sake don't do it again!

Dad.
